ABSTRACT

This is a directory of Wisconsin and federal information sources meant to provide the user with initial contacts and sources of a wide range of socioeconomic data. The materials described in this directory are available through the Wisconsin library network. Major resources for the documents include federal and state depository libraries, public libraries, and system headquarters libraries, as well as the libraries of various state agencies: however, any Wisconsin library can obtain materials for the user. A listing of state agency reference librarians and state depository libraries is provided. Sociceconomic data are listed under the broad headings of General Statistical Sources, Business Activity, Education, Energy and Utilities, Environmental/Natural Resources, Government, Health and Welfare, Housing, Labor Market Information and Wages, and Earnings and Prices. Each category lists under appropriate subheadings the source title: frequency of publication: geographic coverage: applicability by race, age, or sex as appropriate: a contact point for ordering the source: and a description of the source format (publication, computer file, report, etc.). An index of subheadings within each category is included. (RAA)

PREFACE

The directory of state and federal information sources is meant to provide you with initial contacts and sources of a wide range of socioeconomic data. It was prepared by Janet Pugh of the Department of Industry, Labor and Human Relations and Charles Hackner and Carol Tank of the Office of State Planning and Energy, with invaluable contributions from many people from state and federal agencies. As you find additional information sources, please notify Janet Pugh at 266-2832 or Carol Tank at 266-5711. These additions will be included in future updates of this directory.

LIBRARIES

The materials described in this report may be obtained through the Wisconsin library network. Major resources for documents include the federal and state depository libraries and the public library systems headquarter libraries, as well as the libraries within the various departments of the state government. However, any library in Wisconsin can request materials for you through interlibrary loan. Just ask your local librarian. If you have any difficulties locating material, please contact the Reference and Loan Library in Madison (608/266-1057).

Several of the libraries described below in the Wisconsin State Documents Depository System are also depositories for Federal Government Documents.

WISCONSIN STATE DOCUMENT DEPOSITORY LIBRARIES

The state depository program consists of a system of libraries designated as collectors of Wisconsin public documents. These depository libraries receive public documents as they are published, free of charge, and assume the responsibility for organizing and preserving these publications and promoting and assisting in their reference use by library patrons. This program has been in existence since 1901 and is intended to provide ready access to the large quantities of useful documents produced by the Wisconsin state government.

The libraries which have been designated by the Division for Library Services as state document depositories are located throughout Wisconsin and include public as well as academic libraries. The program is administered by the Division's Reference and Loan Library in Madison which serves as liaison between the users and the producers of documents. The Reference and Loan Library receives publications from the issuing agencies and sends biweekly shipments to the designated libraries.

The depository program benefits libraries by providing valuable reference materials automatically and without cost. It benefits the state agencies by reducing the time and expense involved in statewide dissemination of their publications through a systematic, centralized distribution of a minimum number of copies to a maximum audience. Most of all, it benefits Wisconsin citizens by providing ready access to current information about their state.

State agency libraries are designed to serve the reference and informational needs of Wisconsin government officials and employees. We provide the research materials upon which policy decisions are based.

Each library maintains a special collection of books, documents and periodicals which pertain specifically to the functional responsibilities of our particular agency. We provide reference and research service, serve as the archives for agency reports and publications, and offer assistance to students doing research on state government operations.

State agency libraries specialize in information for and about Wisconsin state government.
